It doesn't look like there's anything specific on the agenda for BLM and is mostly advocacy regarding the review. I'd sit this one out.

Tim,

This seems to be CLF's regular Friends Network call.

We've participated in the past but not every time. We would provide any shareable updates and then listen to the Friends groups discussion.

Chris and Nikki, thanks for your thoughts about whether anyone from BLM should participate given the ongoing monuments review. I'm inclined to say no.

Thanks, Sally

Dear Friends Grassroots Network and Partners:

Please join our Friends Grassroots Network call on Thursday to discuss Sec. Zinke interim report that includes a recommendation to dramatically eliminate lands from Bears Ears National Monument. Get an update on how we're working together to fight to defend national monuments and the National Conservation Lands.

Call-in information:

Access Code: 573-616-683

Agenda:

- Welcome new CLF staff: Brian Sybert, Executive Director and David Feinman, Director of Government Affairs
- Bears Ears "Review Period" update from Utah and next steps
- Substantive comments submission on all monuments under review
- Updates from partners working on other important efforts outside of defensive campaigns

More Information:

To adapt for your local area, just fill in your own information and add local quotes and you have a terrific press release about the ongoing "review period"; how people can stand up against this attack on all of our National Monuments. Let us know if you need assistance.

Remember, it is important that people know that if this ill-informed recommendation is made for Bears Ears, the national monuments in your state could be next.

For more information on the legal rationale on why shrinking or rescinding monuments is illegal, please take a look at this informative document.

The deadline to submit public comments for the other national monuments highlighted the Executive Order is July 10. Let people know they can still go to www.MonumentsforAll.org to make their voice heard.

Sample Facebook post:

Protected landscapes where we hunt, fish, camp and hike are part of what makes our country great. Sample Instagram post:

An attack on our national monuments is an attack on all of our public lands and American national heritage. The #BearsEars landscape contains tens of thousands of cultural sites, spectacular natural features, and world-class opportunities for outdoor recreation. But will future generations have the chance to experience its wonders? #MonumentsForAll @usinterior @whitehouse @usinterior @mypubliclands @usdagov

Talking Points:

To be clear, Zinke is recommending that President Trump eliminate important parts of Bears Ears National Monument - a move that is illegal, undermines tribal sovereignty and ignores the will of the American people.

National parks and protected public lands and waters help define who we are as a nation. Attempts to rip apart the fabric of national monuments are an assault on our nation's historical, cultural and natural heritage.

Utahans and the majority of Americans support national monuments and oppose removal of protections.

- Despite the woefully short initial 15-day comment period, the response from Utah and across the nation was loud and clear. More than 700,000 Americans voiced support for the Bears Ears, with 99% of the comments in support of the national monument. Click here to read this article regarding the outpouring of support generated.
- National parks, monuments, public lands and waters are a critical part of the nation's economy - especially for rural and Western communities that benefit from tourism, outdoor recreation and quality of life associated with healthy public lands.

An Attack on Bears Ears is an Attack on All Monuments

- With all national monuments designated since 1996 still under "review" this recommendation confirms the Trump Administration is on a disturbing path to undermine our National Conservation Lands. We still have until July 10 to make our voices heard in support of our other national monuments.
